Although it is now considerably more than three centuries and a half since the large island of Papus, or New Guinea, was discovered by the Portuguese commanders, D'Abreu and Serram, it appears somewhat surprising to reflect that, as a country, it remains practically unknown to Europeans. Nearly 50 years ago the Dutch, it is true, attempted to form a settlement at Fort Dn Rus, in Triton's Bay: bu they were soon compelled to abandon that low lying spot, in consequence of the unhealthines of the climate, which there appeared to be absolutely fatal to Europeans. Later (in 1835) an expedition, fitted out by the same maritime people, undertook to survey the "River Dourga"-beginning at about 100 miles to the NE of False Cape, latitude 87 24' south, and longitude 137°38' east-but (beyond proving that the "river" was a strait 90 miles long and defining the limits of Prince Frederick Henderik's Island) not much was then effected by the Dutch, who have peculiar facilities for prosecuting their researches in this direction French expeditions, commanded by Duperrey and Dumont D'Urville (1822-5, 1827-9, 1837. 1840) have also added to our knowledge of the southern, western, and northern coasts of New Guinea: but our own countrymen have, more recently, explored much of this terra incognita, so interesting to the geographer, the ethnologist, and the naturalist. In 1845, Captain Blackwood, of H.M.S. Fly, surveyed the Great Bight on the southeast coast, and after Captain Blackwood, Captain Stanley, of the Rattleanaka - Lientpount Vule, of the Bramble, and Captain Moresby, of the Basilisk, all made further discoveries in those parts. A scientific commission, sent by the Netherlands in 1858, also carried on the work; and Signor D'Alberti (the Italian traveler and naturalist) has yet more lately labored in the same field, and not without results honorable to himself and useful to science. In spite of all this, however, "Your Excellency Governor Kapena, gen- New Guinea remains still unknown, a country tlemen of the Committee, and the good people full of problems that yet await satisfactory and the Officers of the "Pensacola," I thank lens, and more especially to add to these reyou very kindly for the pleasant words of wel- sources of natural history, as opened up in the come which you have spoken and for our wast island of New Guinea, that Mr. William Macleay, of this city, has determined to fit out "The Government of the United States, its at his own expense an expedition to Papus to and sympathy, for the Hawaiian Islands and and fauna of New Guines. The unity of Germany has been accomplished by his means mainly, though it was Napoleon III, who gave the welding stroke to the iron which the Chancellor had heated and laid on the anvil. Now also that this has been done, who can deny that liberty is progressing in Gormany?

The career of Bismarck as a diplomatist is me of which he and his nation may be proud, and whatever may be said or suspected to the contrary there is against him no evidence of falsehood or fraud. Let this be set down if agreeable to his being too clever not to know that falsehood and fraud are not likely to be ultimately successful, but it cannot be denied. He has been charged with exacting hard terms from France and Austria, but let those who make this charge put themselves in the positions of his countrymen and their army, and then ask themselves if they would have been satisfied with smaller demands. Had he acrepted less than he obtained on these occusions he might with some show of justice have been stigmatized as a traiter. The nation had been orced into war, and having been victorious was entitled to obtain such terms as seemed likely to guarantee them from such an occurrence at least for their own generation. No ne is disposed to deny that the great German Chancellor is a man of consummate ability, but when the day arrives in which a calm and dispassionate history of our own time comes to be rritten, we greatly mistake the true character of the man if he shall not then be acknowledged as a sound, far seeing and honest statesman and diplomatist, and a true patriot.- British Minil.

The Coming Spelling Match.

By request there was a meeting of a number of those interested in the matter, held last Satarday evening at the residence of Mr. H. M. Whitney, to make some of the necessary arrangements for the Spelling match which has peen announced to come off on Thursday evenng, in connection with the Ice-cream Festival for the benefit of the Bethel organ-fund,

After due discussion the following conclusions were arrived at, viz: that there shall be three dictionaries admitted as standards : Webster's, Worcester's, and Walker's. Therefore any spelling authorized by either of these authorities is to be deemed correct. Each speller shall distinctly pronounce each word before attempting to spell it. Each speller shall have but one trial on a word,

The Hon. A. S. Hartwell was elected Umpire, and a Propounder and two leaders were also selected, consisting of Mr. L. McCally, Mr. H. L. Sheldon and Mr. Geo. H. Dole,

It was decided to offer a First and Second prize, to be given to those two spellers who hall longest retain the floor, the first consisting of a copy of Webster's Unabridged dictionary, which the recipient may exchange for any other book or books of equal value, if he desires so to do. The second to be a copy of that magmincent work recently published entitled Christ in Art."

The contest is open to all of every age, sex, and nationality, and those who are willing to enter the lists are requested to leave their names with either the editor of this paper, or either of the gentlemen named above.

Boyle recently exhibited before the photographic section of the American Institute in New York, a new optical instrument, which he called the microscopic telescope. It consists of two parallel telescopes, about three feet in length and two inches in aperture, connected with hinges at the ends, and separated to the distance of the eyes by an adjusting screw, In order to produce the effect of the microscope he places, before the object-glass, prismatic lenses of about three feet focus, so that when these lenses are in position, an object three feet in front of the object-glass will be seen with both eyes distinctly, and magnified according to the power of the eye-piece. With this instrument although but lately completed, he has already made one curious discovery-that no matter how long a sponge may have been kept dry, its life is apparently restored when it is wet, The sponge being wet with warm water and placed in a warm room, the extremities of the sponge, after a little while, appear to be alive, and reach out like so many snakes. The longer they are the greater the motion. He had observed that wetting the sponge with salt water seemed to increase the motion. Nearly half of all the slender points seemed to come FTHE UNDERSIGNED HAVING BEEN AP to life, but after they become dry the motion
